The gallery had never had an intern, but after I asked if I could start over the summer, I essentially created my own internship. Now they have an ongoing international internship program!

After graduation, I will curate the art collection of a philanthropic society in Chicago. While there, I plan to join an artist collective.

While studying abroad at South Africa’s University of Cape Town, with the help of Dean Carmon Colangelo, I was connected with and worked at the David Krut Projects art gallery.

As a printing assistant, I worked closely with the master printer and workshop manager to edition a series of etchings, run a monotype workshop, and assemble prints for artist William Kentridge.

Getting to know myself...

Bringing my story to life...
The gallery had never had an intern, but after I asked if I could start over the summer, I essentially created my own internship. Now they have an ongoing international internship program!

Kelsey Brod, a senior with majors in printmaking and environmental studies, interned with David Krut Projects in Johannesburg, South Africa.

As a printing assistant, I worked closely with the master printer and workshop manager to edition a series of etchings, run a monotype workshop, and assemble prints for artist William Kentridge.

Up next... After graduation, I will curate the art collection of a philanthropic society in Chicago. While there, I plan to join an artist collective.

20 Employers will have 45 seconds each to pitch their summer internship opportunities at this Friday’s Internship SLAM
